Dear Mr. Casey:

I want to thank you personally for speaking to the Defense Intelligence School faculty and student body on 25 October as part of our Enrichment Lecture Program. I realize that your schedule was so busy that you had to make a special effort to find time to attend the Pentagon luncheon and then speak at DIS. On behalf of all those at the School who had the privilege of hearing you, I express gratitude.

Students and faculty alike sometimes tend to isolate themselves in an "academic" approach to intelligence problems that may bear little relation to the real world of intelligence service. The opportunity to see and hear the Director of Central Intelligence himself talking about that real world helps all of us to realize that we are not just studying academic abstractions at the School, but that we are preparing ourselves for careers as practicing intelligence professionals.

Thank you again for speaking at DIS. I hope that you found the give-and-take with our faculty and students to be stimulating and that you will consider participating in other DIS programs in the future.

Sincerely,
